

My Travel Diary

Paste
Doll picture
here

My Travel Diary

City: Paris

Day 1

7:15 a.m.

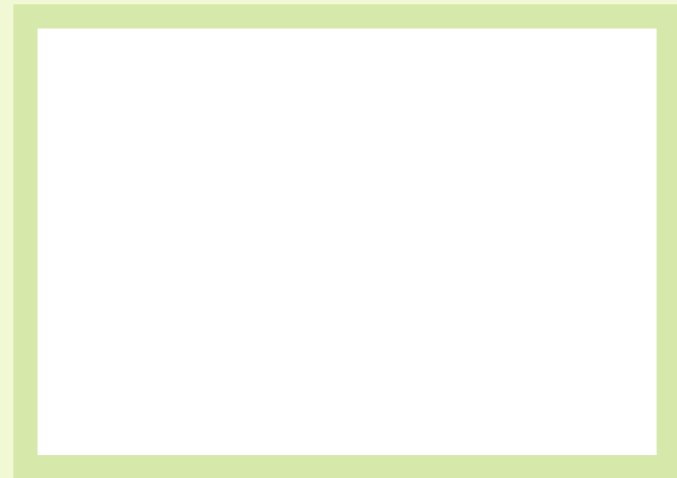

Dear Diary,
I'm so lucky! Today we flew into "Pair-ee" (that's how the French people say Paris), the capital city of France. From the plane I could see rivers and cathedrals and lots of really old, beautiful buildings. It looks so pretty! I can't wait to explore the city.

11:29 a.m.

Bonjour (hello), dear diary,
Now we're at Le Café Enchanté picking up a special déjeuner (lunch) so that we can have a picnic in the park! Right next to us is a mademoiselle feeding her big, fluffy black poodle croissants and cheese—right in the café! If I had known dogs could go into restaurants over here, I wouldn't have left Coconut at the hotel.

4:52 p.m.

Dear Diary,
While I was walking Coconut after lunch in Les Jardins du Ranelagh (a big park with lots of trees and a playground), I noticed a bunch of kids giggling and clapping. We ran down to check it out—and it turned out to be a puppet show! They were performing "Puss in Boots," and Guignol, a famous French puppet, starred in it. The show was so funny that my sides still hurt from laughing!

Here's a picture of Coconut and me at the park in Paris!

[Draw and/or paste your doll and Coconut above.]

Day 2

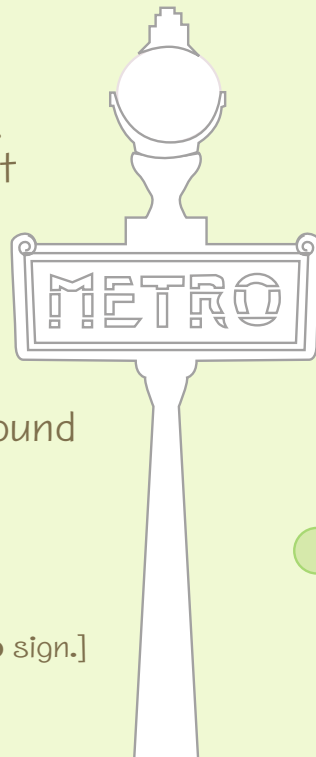

5:06 a.m.

Dear Diary,
I'm soooo excited to be in Paris that I just couldn't sleep anymore! I'm even dressed and ready to go. Since it's kind of chilly, I'm wearing my new French béret and poncho. Come on, sun! Rise already so that we can go sightseeing!

10:42 a.m.

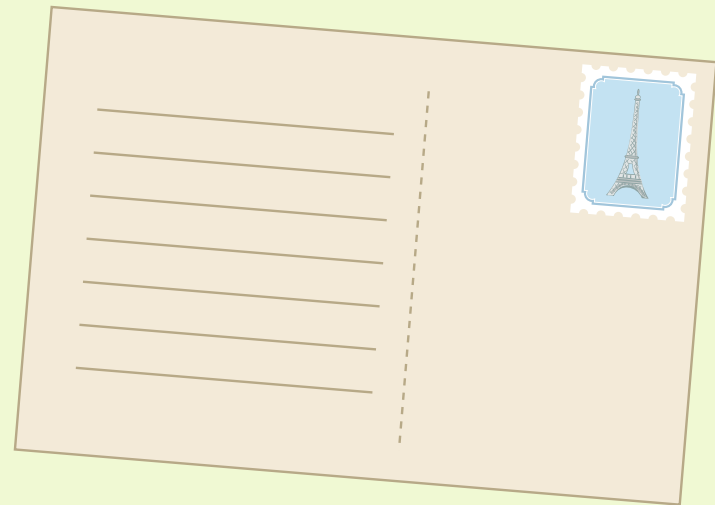

Dear Diary,
Finally! We're on our way. We're on the Métro right now, and I can't believe how fast this subway goes! It's whizzing us through these huge, long tunnels; it feels like we're on an underground rocket ship. Next stop: Le Tour d'Eiffel!

[Color in the Métro sign.]

3:12 p.m.

Dear Diary,
You won't believe it, but I'm all the way at the tippy-top of the Eiffel Tower—well, almost. It is 984 feet tall! To get up here, we had to climb what felt like hundreds of stairs to the second floor, and then take an elevator that zoomed us the rest of the way. You can see all of Paris from here! The people down below look like ants crawling around.

Here's the card I'm sending my best friend back home.

[Write a message on the back of the card.]

Day 3

11:25 a.m.

Dear Diary,

We're at the Louvre—one of the world's most famous art museums. Right in front of me is the Mona Lisa, which is a painting of a woman who is smiling as if she has a secret (at least that's why I think she's smiling). There are so many cool paintings and sculptures to see. With all there is to walk around and see, I hope my feet can keep up!

3:18 p.m.

Dear Diary,

My stomach was grumbling, so we just stopped for an afternoon snack—crêpes. Diary, I wish you had a mouth so that you could take a taste. Crêpes are really thin pancakes, and mine had bananas and chocolate rolled inside and a huge mound of whipped cream on top! They are the yummiest thing I've ever tasted! Mmm!

4:20 p.m.

Diary, I just saw the coolest thing! A man in the park was getting ready to go up in a gigantic hot-air balloon! It had orange, blue, and white stripes on it with a big star in the middle. Coconut barked and barked—I guess she doesn't trust balloons! When we talked to him, he told us that the first humans ever to fly a hot-air balloon did it in 1783, right here in Paris!

[Design and color your own hot-air balloon!]

7:30 p.m.

Well, diary, another day has ended. Tomorrow we return to the airport and leave the City of Lights behind. Everything has been fantastique! I won't say au revoir (good-bye) to Paris, only à bientôt—because that means “see you soon,” and I hope I get to come back again some day!

[Use the next page to draw your doll in a Parisian scene.]

Now get ready, dear diary, because we're on to the next stop on our journey! Where? Well, that's a surprise!